LAUGH LOT

The Age Problem

There are some women who want to be youthful for the entire span of life. If they are sixty and you tell them that they look "in the early thirties" - then they are flattered. But there are times when such a woman can be a nuisance. Janice K is a well known movie and T.V. star. As one critic mentioned in his column, "She can't play teen age roles forever. Time has come for her to settle for grandma parts."

Janice K was at a party attended by a lot of famous people. And there she met Gregian Melatenous, the international banker. And after being with him for fifteen minutes she began her standard line.

"How old do you think I really am?" she smiled sweetly at him.

"That shouldn't be very hard for me to figure out," he began. "You have blue eyes. Which I admire very much. They are sparkling and full of vigor and energy. Let me say that you have the eyes of a girl of 16."

That made Janice K feel very happy. Now she had another admirer.

"Those small lips of yours certainly belong to a debutante of 20. They are most appealing. Keep them that way forever."

She was certain now that she had made a dent in his armor.

"Your two hands are in excellent condition. Belong to a woman of 25. And the dimple on your left cheek belongs to a little girl of 6. Add them and I say that you are exactly 67 years of age."

Know something? He was corfect with his calculations!

Tea Time for Two

"I am unable to understand many of the actions of you Americans," said Lord Beaverbrook to me at a meeting we had one warm afternoon at the Press Association Club." I refer especially to the way you use tea. I have visited many American homes and have been the guest of honor at many affairs. You order your tea boiled. To be so hot that you can actually burn the tip of your tongue. Then what do you do? You blow upon it to get it cool. Why not order it cool in the first place?

Then you squeeze some lemons or slices of lemons to make your tea sour. I won't complain about this. But I am totally unable to understand the next action. You then put sugar into the tea to make it sweet. All beyond my power of comprehension. Why make it sour in the first place?

I know that the Revolutionary War is a sort of delicate topic between an American and an Englishman. I feel it started over the tea. Some of you Americans dressed up to look like Indians. Then dumped the tea into the harbor. Why? You didn't like to pay taxes to the Crown. But ever since you have been paying more and more taxes. Like a Federal Income Tax, a State Income Tax, a Sales Tax, a Gasoline or Petrol Tax, and even Tolls on your highways. Had you just looked ahead in these days, you would not have refused to pay the slight tax on tea. And think of it, my good man. The colonies would have been part of the British Empire for a long time. And you Colonials would have learned to drink tea properly."

---Simple Driving Advice

There are certain mistakes that no married man in his right mind should ever make. We can only mention one here. And that is for a married man to try to teach his wife to drive a car. If he has to beg or borrow the money, let a professional auto school give her the lessons. And thus he will avoid a big fight with his wife. But James Hartshell decided he knew a lot about driving. So why couldn't he teach his wife.

"If it is too hard for me to park my car next to the curb," she said, "Why can't I do like our neighbors do? Park it next to a parked car."

"Some streets have double lines separating the roads. Others have single lines. Did they run out of paint?"

"I don't care if the truck is bigger than our car. He can't just shove me out of the way. I think I ought to teach him a lesson.

"You don't have to raise your voice to me. I don't care how dangerous you think the situation is. Just keep your voice low. Or I will get out of the car right now. And you can make your own supper."

He realized the sooner he stopped teaching her the better. So on the last lesson he said to her very gently.

"Only three things you have to remember. When the traffic light is red, you stop. When the light turns to green you go ahead. And when my face turns white, take your foot off the accelerator!"
